Mental health is all around us, but it’s often misunderstood. Here is some quick info to help demystify what we mean by “mental health” and how to talk about it. ➡️
What is mental health?

Mental health is your general sense of emotional, psychological, and cognitive wellbeing. Everyone has mental health every day, but it’s often ignored unless something is going seriously wrong. The best way to prevent that is to pay attention to your mental health even when you’re feeling ok or even good.

What is the difference between mental health, mental illness, mental wellbeing, & mental fitness?

The language around mental health is constantly evolving, and understanding these terms can help you understand your own experiences and have meaningful conversations about these topics.
A quick way to take tabs on your mental health right now

Notice how your mental health is always changing and that you might have felt better yesterday than you do today. That’s ok. Part of being human is experiencing the ebb and flow of your mental health. Check in with yourself. Ask yourself how you’re really feeling, and see where you fall on the following scale.

IN CRISIS
- Very anxious
- Very low mood
- Absenteeism
- Exhausted
- Very poor sleep
- Weight change

STRUGGLING
- Anxious
- Low mood
- Tired
- Poor performance
- Poor sleep
- Poor appetite

SURVIVING
- Worried
- Irritable
- Sad
- Trouble sleeping
- Distracted
- Withdrawn

THRIVING
- Positive
- Calm
- Performing
- Sleeping well
- Eating well
- Socially active

EXCELLENING
- Cheerful
- Joyful
- Energetic
- Peak performance
- Flow state
- Fully realizing potential

When we’re mentally healthy, we typically don’t think much about it, because it’s invisible. Without a thoughtful practice of looking at your mental health, it can be easy to start to feel unwell without noticing it. One way to make the invisible visible is to look out for signs that your mental health needs some care.

Signs that it’s time to pay attention to your mental health

- Low Energy / Motivation
- Trouble sleeping
- Unexplained physical pain or tension
- Less interest in spending time with loved ones
- Long-lasting sadness, worry, or irritability
- Racing thoughts that feel difficult to get a handle on
- Extremely high or low mood
- Unpleasant thoughts that won’t leave you alone
- Appetite changes
- Neglect of personal care
- Less interest in the things you typically enjoy
- Difficulty focusing on tasks
- Friends & family noticing that you seem different
