The Mental Health Coalition is socializing, normalizing, and destigmatizing mental health while connecting needs to vital resources and necessary support for all.

MHC serves as a coalition of the most impactful mental health organizations, serving millions of communities.

MHC’s approach is quantifiable. Every dollar is treated as an investment (not an expense), with culture-changing, transformative, and live-changing impact.

LAUNCH OF S.O.S.
(SAFE ONLINE STANDARDS FOR KIDS’ MENTAL HEALTH)

ABOUT S.O.S.

The Mental Health Coalition announced our multi-year effort to transform youth mental health in the digital space via the Safe Online Standards for Kids’ Mental Health (S.O.S) initiative, making it easier for people to decipher and decode how to engage with technology in ways that are the most supportive for their mental health.

In partnership with a cross functional group of the most prominent experts in mental health and the world’s leading tech organizations, we are developing the first-of-its-kind social media standards and rating for youth ages 13-24 and their caregivers. Led by Dr. Dan Reidenberg, this effort will ensure safer and more responsible online engagement.

MHC Founder Kenneth Cole sat down with Good Morning America to discuss the Coalition’s new S.O.S. initiative.

The Initiative
With the goal to change the culture around mental wellness at work, The Mental Health Coalition is coordinating a citywide mental health initiative. Together with One Mind at Work, NAMI, Mental Health America and The American Psychiatric Association Foundation we believe this initiative will serve as a model nationally, and even globally.

Inaugural Wellbeing at Work Day
On December 5, we gathered in New York City to lead corporations in committing to advancing, supporting, and sharing mental health “best practices” in the workplace. We received a proclamation from NYC Mayor Eric Adams to memorialize this day annually.

“We spend a significant amount of our waking hours in the workplace and it’s the only place where traditional, operational resources — human, administrative, and financial — can be efficiently leveraged to transform the health and wellbeing of large populations and their families. If we all do this together, we will change culture.”
— Kenneth Cole, MHC Founder
In 2023, MHC convened like-minded individuals via in-person activations across the country to bring resources and awareness, ultimately building support to forge new solutions.
